SIDE LIGHTS on the CIRCUS BUSINESS

By D. W. WATT
Former Manager Burr Robbins and Later Manager of Adam Forepaugh Circuses.

For weeks back all kinds of rumors have been afloat as to the possibility of the Ringlings starting out two or more shows the coming season. An interview with Charles Ringling has settled the matter without any question, for the knowing ones were satisfied that the great Ringlings and Barnum & Bailey would be consolidated for the coming season. Then the rumor was started that they would put out the great Forepaugh & Seligson, and as they owned the title to both these shows, many believe this might come to pass. But when interviewing Charles Ringling, he simply shook his head and said: "Nothing doing, nothing doing." The only show he is interested in the coming season will be known as the great Ringling & Bailey show combined, and although there will be a few others of the smaller size which have been running, growing larger for some years, yet there will be only two great shows the coming season and they will be the Ringling combined with the Barnum & Bailey and Hagberg & Seligson.

Yet there is the Sparks Brothers show one of the smaller ones which has been gradually growing every year until it is now counted as a righted extent of the Forepaugh & Seligson show. And yet one might say that with the country full of money this should be one of the greatest seasons for the circus, for the reason that the public is ready to spend money for entertainment. With many this is true, but the public is more exacting today in the way of the quality than ever before. The show with a reputation of a high standard will make much money the coming season and also get the highest price of admission, but they must be the quality.

Joe Graham, announcer and manager of the privileges with the Ringling show is now in New York making contracts for the coming season and will be located there until the opening of the combined shows in Madison Square Garden which will probably be early in March.

Plans for the big annual banquet and ball of the showmen's league of America are about completed and everything is going along fine. The affair will be held in the Gold Room of the Congress Hotel on Wednesday evening, February 19. Edward P. Newman, chairman of the executive committee, has already received a check for his first ticket, and at a meeting of the league last evening resolutions were handed in for over 200 tickets. However in order that New York Club No. 2 and out-of-town friends and members may receive good seats, no place will be designated until all are heard from, so it is now up to the members to write in as soon as possible and let the committee know how many seats to reserve.

Programmed in regulation style, as The Greatest Show on Earth Today, the circus presented by the men of the camouflage section, with the American Forces in France, stationed in Dijon, at the Cirque de Tivoli, lacked none of the thrills of a genuine American, greatest show on earth—that is if startling announcements of the program were fulfilled. Opening with a concert by the entire company of some sixty-five regular troops, there were dances, bull fights, aerial and ground acts, juggling, black art, "sensational" chariot races by fearless riders from all parts of the

COUNTY BOARD ENDS WINTER TERM; HOLDS OVER IMPORTANT WORK

What the County Board Did. Voted a committee of three, W. S. Perigo, M. P. Richardson and H. B. Moseley to investigate as to need of probation officers for juvenile courts of Beloit and Janesville and to report at April meeting.

Left the matter of disposal of county funds in hands of present special committee, W. S. Perigo, W. W. Dutton, and C. C. O'neal until April meeting of Board.

Owing to failure of special committee on tubercular sanatorium to file report on sites, plans and specifications and method of payment, a resolution giving their moral support to any action taken by District Attorney Willoughby and Commissioner of Highways Moore, for the prosecution of anyone wilfully violating highway laws.

Adopted report of committee on salaries and appropriations and increased the salaries of poor commissioners at $60 per month.

At four o'clock yesterday afternoon the county Board voted an adjournment until April, except when necessary for emergency and for their respective homes after a session that will pass into history as a very ordinary session instead of one of great importance.

Three big questions confronted the members of the board when they convened Tuesday and their ultimate decision in regard to them will not be known until the next meeting. On the other hand, something unexpected came to pass, that of disposing of the office of the county agent. It was hardly expected that this move would be made, though it was well known that the plan to continue the office would meet with some opposition.

A stormy half-day resulted when a resolution was offered appointing a probation officer for the Beloit Municipal Court. The matter was argued from all angles and Judge C. C. O'neal, who had addressed the board, but the motion was lost 13 to 14.

The special committee on county funds will continue over until the board arriving at the conclusion that the committee might possibly arrive at some agreement with the banks so that the funds could remain in the county.

Believes the owners of heavy trucks to watch out this year traveling on the county roads. Commissioner Moore in an address to the board yesterday morning complained of the absolute disregard paid to road regulations by some drivers. He stated that in times past he has barred roads and posted signs for heavy traffic to keep away from the road ruined by the irresponsible driver.

He asked for the moral support of the board in putting a stop to this practice and it was given by a unanimous vote.

Hereafter any driver who wilfully disregards the orders and notices of the commissioner will not only be prosecuted but will have to answer civilly for damages done.

The committee on the tubercular sanatorium was not ready to report and this question will be threshed out in April.

Theodore Roosevelt

Born in New York City, Oct. 27, 1858 Died at Oyster Bay, N. Y., Jan. 6, 1919

"The law of worthy effort, the law of service for a worthy end, without regard to whether it brings pleasure or pain, is the only right law of life, whether for man or woman."

—THEODORE ROOSEVELT

"Much can be done by law towards putting women on a footing of complete and entire equal rights with men—including the right to vote, the right to hold and use property."

—THEODORE ROOSEVELT

"There can be no nobler cause for which to work than the peace of righteousness; and high honors due those serene and lofty souls who with wisdom and courage, with high idealism tempered by sane facing of the actual facts of life, have striven to bring nearer the day when armed strife between nation and nation, between class and class, between man and man shall end throughout the world."

AN AUTOBIOGRAPHY

Starts In Tomorrow's Chicago Tribune

Out of his boundless wisdom Theodore Roosevelt wrote the story of his life shortly before he died. The entire career of this eminent American statesman—from boyhood to Presidency and thence to private life—is reviewed by him in this remarkable and historical document. This story will make better men and women; it will acquaint you with Roosevelt's sense of duty to his country and flag; it will inspire you to newer and higher ideals of American citizenship. It contains a message for every man, woman, boy and girl—a message of vigorous, courageous manhood, straightforward honesty, fearlessness and passionate love of country.

The Chicago Tribune has been granted the exclusive newspaper rights in the Central West to this stirring story of red-blooded, forceful American action and achievement. No other newspaper in this territory will publish it! The Autobiography of Theodore Roosevelt, illustrated with photographs of his birthplace and intimate family life, will be published in The Chicago Tribune beginning tomorrow and continuing daily and Sunday thereafter. OUR SATURDAY NIGHT

In Verdun that day when the fighting ceased, men joyously leaped about, yelling and shouting, singing and kissing each other. Afterwards in the ruins of the old cathedral, they knelt. Mohammedans bumping their heads on the stone floor; Catholics devoutly crossing themselves; Jews and Protestants lifting their shining eyes to Heaven.—B. C. Edworthy in the Red Triangle Magazine.

What a wonderful thing is religion! What an ever-ready solace for the world, regardless of creed. Man turns first to his religion in time of joy or sorrow, sickness or health, poverty or prosperity, sin or uprightness. No matter what his faith there comes a time in his life when he turns to his religion. It is generally when a climax has been reached; when the breaking point is near. He seeks his Deity and either thanks or implores.

When the blanket of peace was flung down over European battlefields last November and the roar of cannon was smothered, and the battlefields became silent after four years of rumbling and crashing Hell, men who had cast aside the teachings of civilization and flung themselves at the invading Hun, paused, exulted with cheers, and when the exuberance had passed, silently sank to their knees and offered praise to their God.

The description of the situation as told by the author of the above lines, perhaps best expresses the feeling of man on such occasions:

"They knew the day and hour when the armistice was to go into effect; the eleventh at eleven o'clock. Everyone in Verdun was wondering whether the Germans would stop firing. The barrage was heavier than any artillery fire Dr. Oscar E. Maurer of New Haven, Conn., had ever heard since he had been in France, and as a Red Triangle worker he has heard some very heavy duels, indeed. Men were crouching here and there behind buildings, as aviators were numerous. Several times Dr. Maurer was asked, 'Do you think that they really will stop firing at eleven?'"

"General Valentine, a member of an English class taught by Professor Collier of Brown University, came up the hill with two officers. Dr. Maurer saluted him courteously, and it was graciously returned. Then they speculated concerning the armistice. Would the Germans cease firing? The general would not guess, he preferred to wait and see.

"Will you permit the cathedral doors to be opened if they do cease firing?" queried Dr. Maurer anxiously. "I believe that the men will wish to sing and pray."

The general readily agreed.

"This was about a quarter to eleven o'clock. Shells were falling everywhere, guns were roaring, two of our heavy fourteens being very near. The men kept coming, hiding around the walls and in the least expected places. Ten minutes of eleven, and still the guns roared on, unmindful of the fact that peace was imminent. Five minutes of eleven, and even the general and his aides were showing signs of nervousness. Still more doughboys came. Moroccans began to show their dusky faces. Some of our own negro troops tried to talk with them. Here and there were English soldiers, others wearing the British uniform, and still more doughboys.

"Then, as suddenly as though God himself had dropped a wet blanket over the crackling flames of Hell and at one blow had extinguished them all the firing and the rumbling immediately ceased. There was an instant's pause in which it seemed as though the world had come to an end. Then from the forty bells high in the still untouched towers of that old cathedral at Verdun, which had witnessed the most heroic sacrifice of life and love save that on Calvary alone, pealed forth as did the voices over the Bethlehem hills, those silver tones that once again were saying, 'Peace on Earth.'

"The men were joyously and deliriously leaping about, yelling and shouting and singing and kissing one another. Slowly those heavy cathedral doors were opened and in rushed about six hundred of the allied soldiers. Dr. Maurer quietly walked to the altar rail and knelt there, praying the prayer of a sincere Christian. Captains, lieutenants, and soldiers reached for the swinging ropes so as to give the bells another pull. Dr. Maurer's heart began to falter, for he feared the opportunity for religious service was lost. But soon they saw the lonely figure kneeling there, and they, too, came forward into the choir space. As he rose he turned, and all was quiet. He said, 'Boys, I believe we all want to sing and that we ought to sing the Doxology.' As though it had been arranged, an English soldier with a splendid tenor voice started that wonderful psalm of praise, 'Praise God from Whom all Blessings Flow,' and everyone who knew the words joined him in the singing.

"At its close, Dr. Maurer lifted his hands, intending to speak. Not misinterpreting but rather interpreting more deeply the meaning of the man, Mohammedans, Catholics, Jews and Protestants, as well as the unbelieving brothers, bowed their heads and fell on their knees in that ruined place. The roof was open to Heaven, because the German shells had destroyed it; benches and windows were protected against further destruction. And there, in that ruined place, six hundred soldiers knelt, Mohammedans bumping their heads on the stone, Catholics devoutly crossing themselves, and Jews and Protestants with hands clasped and faces shining, their eyes lifted to Heaven. The picture was one that would all but break the Master's Heart.

"Dr. Maurer led in that ever-wonderful prayer, 'Our Father who art in Heaven.' At its close he offered an impromptu prayer and then suggested that the Americans sing, 'My Country, 'Tis of Thee' while the English sang, 'God Save the King.' This they did with an intensity of purpose and unity of spirit that will probably never be equalled under like circumstances as long as time shall last. At the close of the singing the Pölius pushed forward and sang as only Frenchmen can sing and as never Frenchmen sang before, the 'Marseillaise.'

"Then, as though the service had been finished, as it was, they quietly turned, reverently leaving the building. General Valentine came forward, took Dr. Maurer's hands in both of his, and with tears streaming down his face said, 'I want to thank you for leading these men on this occasion of grace to offer praise to God for the deliverance of France and the safety of the world.'

GREAT VICTORY WON.

One of the greatest events of history has been recorded with the ratification by the various states of the federal prohibition amendment to the national constitution.

It is really so large a measure we can scarce grasp its full import, and it is hard to realize that the fight of centuries between good and evil has been practically ended.

From every standpoint of economic and moral life it is the one needful action to an era of prosperity, the equal of which this country has never known before. It is as if the prayers of countless humans had been answered and the yoke of despair had been lifted from many a home.

While it is to be regretted Wisconsin did not come in as one of the necessary 36 states, she followed closely and is in line with no uncertain endorsement.

The Gazette is glad the fight for national prohibition has been won—there is no question about the outcome when the act becomes effective. The paper stands for the best in life and heartily endorses this nation wide movement to a better condition.

Just Folks

By EDGAR A. GUEST.

THE COMMON JOYS.

These joys are free for all who live.
The rich and poor, the great and low.
The charms which kindness has to give,
The smiles which friendship may bestow.
The honor of a well-spent life,
The glory of a purpose true,
High courage in the stress of strife,
And peace when every task is through.
Nor class nor caste nor race nor creed,
Nor greater might can take away
The splendor of an honest deed.
Who nobly serves from day to day
Shall walk the road of life with pride,
With friends who recognize his worth.
For never are these joys denied
Unto the humblest man on earth.
Not all may rise to world-wide fame,
Not all may gather fortune's gold,
Not all life's luxuries may claim.
In differing ways success is told,
But all may know the peace of mind
Which comes from service brave and true.
The poorest man can still be kind,
And nobly live till life is through.
These joys abound for one and all:
The pride of fearing no man's scorn,
Or standing firm, where others fall,
Or bearing well what must be borne.
He that shall do an honest deed
Shall win an honest deed's reward,
For these, no nation or creed can withhold,
Life unto every man affords.

WHO'S WHO in the Dax News

GRAND DUKE CYRIL.

Recent exposures of the scheme to compose anew a monarchical government in Russia, revealed the Grand Duke Cyril, cousin of the late Czar Nicholas, as the central figure. Ever since 1912, when the serious illness of the Grand Duke, the late Czar's son, Alexander, excited fear that the czar might leave no male heir, Cyril has been supposed to be an aspirant, and since the deposition of the czar, the Royalists have put him forward as pretender to the throne.

Cyril is 42.

Unlike the czar, he did not marry out of his class, but he married his first cousin after she had been divorced and listened to criticism both because of the relationship and the divorce. She was the daughter of the Duke of Edinburgh and of a Russian grand duchess. The two cousins were childhood lovers, influenced by their mother, the duke made a match between the daughter and the Grand Duke of Hess, brother of the young czar. It was not happy union and after a divorce had been granted the girl eloped with her Russian cousin and was married to him. Two children were born of the marriage and the family line has been happily continued.

While the Grand Duke Cyril was put forward as the central figure in the aspirations of the monarchists in their recent activities in Stockholm, their plans provided an alternate in the person of Grand Duke Alexander Michaelovich, the husband of Xenia, sister of the former czar, who would have succeeded to the throne if the Romanoff family through the female line preserving it for the generation of the former czar.

Forty Years Ago

The Janesville Daily Gazette, Jan. 18, 1879.—The estate of the deceased George Mack was brought up before Justice Frichard yesterday. The estate is said to amount to about $6,000 and the claims against it amount to about two-thirds of that amount.

There are to be lively times at the Grange hall in the town of Janesville. On the last day of this month there is to be a Grange dance. To those who go with teams it will be a matter of interest to learn that the stabling enlarged so that sixty teams can now be housed and well cared for, new sheds having been built in substantial and commodious manner.

Efforts are being made to bail Mrs. Mack. It is claimed that she is too pale, and that unless she gets fresh air she will die. Her bail was fixed at $5,000 and it is doubtful whether she can find security for that amount.

Rev. Mr. McLean, rector of Trinity Episcopal church, will lecture at All Souls church next Tuesday evening. It is well enough to arrange for a race for a purse of $50, using Main street as a course, but when it comes to carrying the arrangements into effect there is a slight obstruction in the person of Marshall Keating, who has taken a fresh oath that travelers on the highway shall not have their lives endangered by any such sport.

Voice of the People

To the Editor:

We people of our assembly district are indignant. Mr. Nolan's friends are surprised. Men who voted for him are disappointed. No one seems to understand why he should serve the liquor traffic, when it was his duty to serve the best interests of his district. Our state was about to answer the roll call upon a proposition that would have been an honor to Wisconsin. It was our opportunity to be among the first thirty-six states to lead in this forward movement. It would have been an honor to Wisconsin to occupy that position and it would have done so were it not for Mr. Nolan and the interests he represented.

It must appear to every one that his resolution was not offered in good faith. Everybody knew that the issue would be settled before the spring election. The only effect it could possibly have would be to advertise our district as being under brewery domination and to advertise Wisconsin as still being under control of the liquor interests.

If Mr. Nolan had not introduced the resolution it is possible the brewers would have found someone who would. It is the situation regarding public morals that concerns us here. It involves a principle that is vital to democracy.

If men will serve the liquor traffic in the legislature they will serve it in other capacities. It is such occurrences that shake men's faith. It is men like Nolan who destroy confidence in legislative bodies. Such men are in public responsible for the widespread distrust of the present day. They cause men to say that democracy is a failure. They breed the Bolshevik spirit. They cause the blighting of revolution, anarchy, and other kindred social ailments. Public office is a public trust.

A man elected to office should have a sense of responsibility to the people whom he ought to represent and the people that mean so much to the American people.

The office should never be made a subject of prostitution. Mr. Nolan has not only brought upon himself the disrespect of his fellow citizens who expected better things of him, but to the people of his district he has brought a sense of humiliation and feeling of disgrace that will not soon be forgotten.

A WOMAN'S BUSINESS

"YOU OWE ME SOMETHING!" No, Walt was not there. Janet wondered why it should surprise her to come home and find Walt absent. It was only a little past seven. Perhaps he had been detained at the office by a multitude of necessary things. Perhaps he had come in, found she had not arrived, and run out for a bite of dinner. Janet came in, he had always been there before.

The apartment had a peculiarly cold and sinister air about it. Janet, who had been so warm and cozy at her things, she had a vague feeling of guilt. For the first time since her new quarters had been opened, she was working day and night to the utmost of her reserve forces, she had a qualm of conscience toward her home and her husband. Until this moment it had not occurred to Janet that in her ambition to make good professionally, she was utterly ignoring everything else. And that perhaps this was an unwise procedure.

After exasperating things were over, she had hurried home, the earliest for nearly a week, expecting to enjoy an Italian table d'hôte in some lively little restaurant, telling Walt the white bait her triumph in getting a certain story into the newspaper on the work of the tenement commission. And now—an empty chair, a weary body, a worried mind, and no dinner!

The clock struck eight. Janet rose stiffly from her chair and put on her things. "Very well," she was saying to herself, "I'll carry out my plan of independence. I'll take myself out to dinner. I'll go to Raffaello's or Mezzaluna—anywhere where it's bright—and read an evening paper for companionship. I don't need any body else to take care of me!" There was just a tinge of recklessness in Janet's spirit as she left the house. Just enough to make her feel glad when she caught sight of her car, which she had left at a dashing stop at the curb.

"Well, I call this providential!" he cried, as he saw her. "Thought I'd take a chance on finding you and the old man and spend you up the drive for a breath of air. Why—why, what's up—anything?" he asked, as Janet looked at him with an odd smile, saying, "Nothing in greeting. 'Where is the old man?' Working late?"

Janet shook her head. "I don't know," she said, trying to be casual and cheerful. "Sure, Kneer Neill hated long explanations and 'sob stories.' 'Come on, climb in. We'll go for a spin anyhow.' Roy did as he always did—went for a grand old time in his own mind he decided that Janet Steadman and her husband had a flare-up of some sort. He didn't much care. He wasn't crazy about Steadman, anyhow—liked him about enough, but he hadn't any special admiration for a man who didn't make money. Making money was Roy's highest aim in life. Spending it was his greatest pleasure. He was willing to spend on Janet as much as she would allow him to."

Janet hesitated, one foot on the running board. "I—was going round to Raffaello's," she smiled. "Haven't had a dinner."

"Whew—w-w-w!" whistled Roy. "I've been sent to you from heaven. Jump in."

"Janet!" called Walt's voice suddenly and sharply, just as she was about to jump. She and Roy Neill turned with a start. Walt's tone was strangely emphatic. "You're not to go, Janet. Please! You—you owe me something."

HEART AND HOME PROBLEMS

BY ELIZABETH THOMPSON

LETTERS MAY BE ADDRESSED TO MISS THOMPSON, IN CARE OF THE GAZETTE

Dear Mrs. Thompson: When I was sixteen years old I married a widower with three children. He had been married twice before he married me, and he said that this second wife was cruel to his children and that is why he divorced her. I worked very hard to be a real mother. I sewed for the three children besides doing all my own house work, and when they were naughty I was so kind so that they could go to high school.

My husband was a drinking man when I married him, but I did not know that he drank so much. I don't know what to do. His children are married and he has left me. I have to work to pay my own rent and do not get any help. This would not be so if only he comes home at times and lives with me without giving me any money.

He has been away for three months, and now he has come back, paid the rent and offered me ten dollars if I will let him stay.

I thought I was rid of him. What shall I do? DOUBTFUL. Your husband has decided to reform and be a help to you, let him stay. But just as soon as he starts drinking and comes to give you money, see that he leaves for good. He has been away for three months and wants to come to live with you and does not help him to be a man.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: Our class at school is going to have a dance and the girls can either invite some one from another class or outside school, or be invited by some one in the class. I am going with a girl and I would not care to go with any one who might invite me.

This noon I was in the hall talking to the boy I go with and one of the committee came up and asked if I had invited anyone. I said I had not, and then I invited my boy friend and he wouldn't go because he thought I thought I had to ask him. I will not go to the dance if he will not go. What can I do to make him go? I know he wants to go.

Write the boy a note. Tell him that your decision was not forced by what your classmate said. Do not urge him to go, but mention that you will be disappointed if he does not.

HEALTH TALKS

BY WILLIAM BRADY, M. D.

LETTERS MAY BE ADDRESSED TO DR. BRADY, IN CARE OF THE GAZETTE

CANCER IN EVERY FAMILY

In reminding readers that one in every nine women and one in every thirteen men die of cancer, I do not mean to frighten any one. One out of nine women and one out of thirteen men are liable to succumbing to a still greater chance of succumbing to cancer, or to cardiovascular disease. The purpose of mentioning these facts is to remind readers that, if there has been no known case of cancer in the family for a generation or two back, that is all the more reason to anticipate its possible occurrence in the family now, for no family can remain long exempt from cancer. It is painful to contemplate how great a proportion of cancer victims are doomed through their own individual neglect. It is painful to know how many victims, knowing they have cancer, wilfully refuse to submit to the only treatment which offers a reasonable chance of cure.

We know that a considerable share, probably one-half of all cancer deaths, are preventable. They are preventable by early recognition of the nature of the trouble and immediate operation. Ignorance is the cause of fully half the fatalities from cancer. For example, it is ignorance and nothing else in the world that prompts a woman to postpone seeking medical advice on a ground that it is indicative of an intelligent woman can possibly harbor such ideas. It is ignorance that prompts a man to experiment upon his stomach trouble instead of consulting a physician about it.

Cancer of the stomach is the most frequent situation in men, and the symptoms are those of alleged "dyspepsia" developing after the age of forty. Cancer of the stomach is the most frequent situation in women, and the symptoms are those which fishwives assure the victim are caused by the "change of life." A physician, vent, by the way, which never causes symptoms.

A Miserable, Anxious Existence. A woman who used to live in our town, but who has lived elsewhere the last three years, was back on a visit recently, and we were having a visit from her old friends and old acquaintances. "What has happened to Mrs. E.?" was one of her first questions. "She has grown so much older in the last few years." What has happened? We looked at each other and considered it for a moment. Mrs. E. is a widow with a small but a splendid, very good health, and no family cares to age her. She's Just Clinging On And It. Ages. Finally the woman who knows Mrs.

What You'll Wear When March Comes

By Eloise.

We are all getting tired of that winter coat and velvet hat and it is ready to melt away. I am sure that the advance spring styles in the shop windows. In many sections it is much to cold to buy the spring outfit now, but there is no climate which would prohibit thinking about it. The suit and hat are always the most important questions in the spring. Real straw hats are already appearing on the avenues, but only on the women who always go to extremes. The suits, however, are still confined to the style books and the shop windows. Brown duvetyn makes this charming style which illustrates some of the new fashion notes for the warm days to come. The loose box coat will be a feature of many a spring suit while the long light skirt is already making its appearance on some of the late winter models. A tan broadcloth vestee of odd design is a feature of this suit which may not find its way to many others. The small hat of gray satin and the handbag are both selected from the choicest of the new spring arrivals.

E. best, spoke up thoughtfully, "I think it's just one thing; trying to keep in with that West Side Set (in our town the West Side Set are a group of people with rather more money and more social pretensions than the rest of us.) You know she hasn't much money herself, and she's not brilliant enough to keep in by her own merits. I know she takes a lot of snubs and rudenesses, and I know she feels it badly when she's left out of things. I imagine she worries a good deal when she's asked to go to a party. Really, when you stop to think of it, it must be a miserable, anxious, unsatisfactory kind of existence, and I don't doubt that is what nags her."

Why will people do that sort of thing? Think Of The Happiness She Could

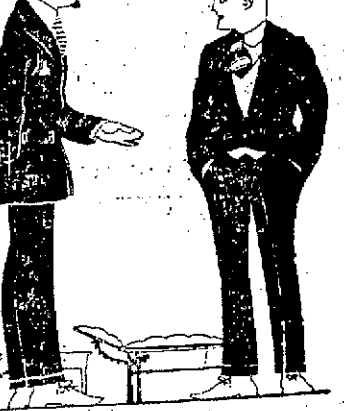

Mrs. E., as I said before, has a small but adequate income. She could have all the pleasure and happiness that a pleasant home, books, music, the theatre, nice clothes and a little travel would bring. She could also have the great joys of service. And, of course, if she chose, she could have plenty of friends of more moderate means and, to the best of my honest judgment, of just as great charm and interest as most of the people of the West Side Set.

And, instead of talking, all these good things she stands ready to offer, she prefers to spend her money and herself in a continual struggle to keep in with people who are rude to her.

Social Life Is A Game. But Is The Game Worthwhile?

It is really incomprehensible to me how people can do that sort of thing. How they can struggle and push for the sake of social advantage. I explain it to myself by saying that to them the whole thing is a sort of game. An invitation to a more or less exclusive affair is a point won; a failure to receive an expected invitation is a set back, and when their appetite for more, just as one is the more eager for the reward when one has been set down at bridge.

"But if they game it's not worth the candle," the old saying goes, surely this is one such. Surely life can furnish something better than such a miserable, anxious existence."

Tales of the Friendly Forest

Well, as soon as the great big American Eagle had the Red, White and Blue flag waving over the good and true, you know, fastened to the big high pole at Camp Calhoun, as I told you in the last story, all the bunny boys in khaki gave three cheers and two tigers, and after that they set to work drilling. And some of them dug trenches and others mounted the big cannons, and then Gen. Lucky Leftindfoot, the old gentleman rabbit, you know, said to a little bunny, "Look here, you don't let your pants hang properly. And to another little rabbit he said, 'Your hind feet are out of line. Keep in time to the music. And now, they could be the marching perfectly. I'm more than I can tell, for that band played the most wonderful music you ever heard. Why, it would almost make a fish walk on his tail like a snake."

Well, after two or three days, Uncle Lucky—excuse me, I mean Gen. Lucky Leftindfoot—told all his bunny soldiers that they must go to Rabbitville and help sell Liberty bonds. So off they started down the road, clipperly clip, liberty lip, and when they were nearly there a big wagon met them full of paper, Liberty bonds. So each little bunny pinned one on his coat and Uncle Lucky pinned two on his coat tails, and then they marched double quick and standing along the sidewalks and crowded the grand stands, and how they cheered! My goodness me! You could hardly hear the Rabbit Band at all.

And when they came to Uncle Lucky's bank they all stopped, and then everybody ran up and bought Liberty bonds by the hundreds. And Uncle Lucky made a speech, for he was the president of the bank, you remember, and then the people rushed forward again and bought more Liberty bonds until there was only one left.

Only one Liberty bond left! cried the dear old gentleman rabbit, standing by the side of a statue of George Washington. "I'll buy this bond," he said, and then who do you suppose shouted, "I will!" Why, the big Circus Elephant. And he took out a thousand-dollar bill and gave it to Uncle Lucky, and then the big elephant, who had been in the Liberty band in his trunk and went back to the circus.

Notes on Red Cross Work

(Arranged by Mrs. Abbie Helms.) This week from the 13th to the 20th, is designated as the National Nurses' Survey Week, when all the resources of each community are to be listed, so as to find out who could be depended upon in an emergency to do nursing in that locality. The purpose of the nursing survey is primarily to find and record every woman who has had any training in caring for the sick, and the following groups are to be registered: Graduate nurses; pupil nurses, now receiving training; undergraduate nurses, now training; trained attendants; nurses in hospitals and institutions; practical nurses, midwives, and women who have taken Red Cross courses. Mrs. J. R. Whitman, has been head of the committee of Rock county, and has been assisted in the clerical work by Miss Julia Enright.

A formidable amount of work is still before the officers of the Red Cross, according to advice from headquarters, but it lies mostly in using up the materials already on hand. Notice has been received that the knitting could stand in need of a little more work. In the last quota 25 women's petticoats were sent by mistake; but these were mostly taken by classes at the high school and finished up for the occasion.

There are piles of socks being counted and tied up in the knitting department, and must all have their label sewed on before being packed. They are coming in very nicely from the branches and probably will be all ready for shipment on Monday. Packing has gone on during all the latter part of the week. Lima was the first of the branches to return finished quota of socks. Mrs. Frahm is chairman of this branch. Some very interesting sweaters have been received in this department. One, made by Chester St. Clair, is of very neat workmanship. He is a boy 17 years old. The Edgerton chapter sent a sweater made in a fancy stitch, which is very attractive. It was made, so the placard read, by George Hain, and the garment is composed of 36,256 stitches, while there is a flag of embroidery on the chest which has 593 stitches.

A new quota of khaki slings for convalescent men has just been received, but the material has not yet arrived. The knitting committee wish to emphasize the fact that they are to be shipped on Monday and Tuesday, and all knitted articles are to be brought in at that time.

The War Work Committee of the Philadelphia Y. W. C. A. has opened a cafeteria in their building for women war workers who have been provided with rooms by the committee.

THE GREAT BOND MYSTERY.

Montmorency Weatherstone, the great banker, had been foully murdered—but the worst of it is yet to come. The murderer had not only taken the life of the banker but he had disappeared with two bushels of perfectly good bonds.

For days the police had tried to trace Honolulu Bill, the murderer and robber. Sheerluck Bones, the mightiest detective in all the known world, had worn out nine disguises, all to no avail.

Then came midnight. A Roughneck darted down the street, skidded up an alley and gave three times three knocks at the door of a mighty poor shack.

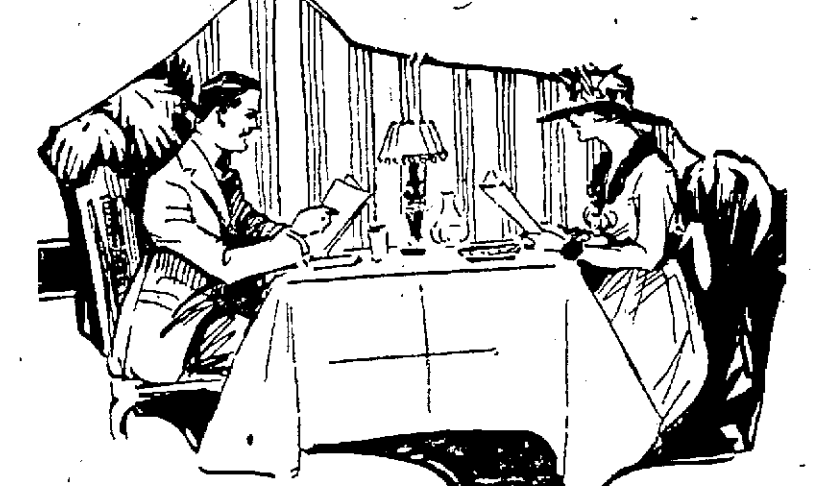

Listen to this, please. This shack is the home of Jack the Wop and Jack the Wop was Honolulu Bill's partner in crime. The Roughneck at the door whispered—

"Let me in, Jack." "Are you alone?" "Alone." "Are you followed?" "Yes—yes, quick." Instantly the door split in twain and repaired itself as the Roughneck entered and hastily drank a tumbler of red-eye. "Thank heaven I am safe at last." "How long have you been back and where is Sheerluck Bones?" "One hour and four minutes. Australia. Good for you. Did you kill the banker?" "Sure Bill. Chopped off his head with a Boy Scout ax, dragged the stiff to the river, weighed it down with a couple of shrapnel tins to explode in an hour threw it in the river, eighteen paces below the bridge." "Bully for you. Where's the swag?" "The swag?" "I hid it." "Where at?" "Where at?" "I put it in the tool box of the banker's flivver and drove the flivver over the bridge. He will never be discovered. Is that all you want to know, Bill?" "Bill?" "Yes, Bill, B-I-L-L, Bill." "My name is not Bill." "If you are not Bill, Honolulu Bill, who the devil are you?"

For answer the other pulled off his false hair and whiskers and such things with one hand while with the other he covered the murderer with two or three eighty-seven caliber automatic revolvers and cried—

"I am Sheerluck Bones, the greatest Detective of them all!"

CHAPTER XXVI.

Lella was determined to endure everything that might be necessary to regain her beauty. She would go through any ordeal of knives or plaster casts or splints or medicines for that. She was quite grim about it. Her resolution extended to the spending of as much of Bayard's money as might be necessary on surgeons' fees and doctors' bills. If she bankrupted Bayard it would be with the tenderest motives.

Five times she went to the operating table, made that infernal journey into etherland, knowing what afterwards awaited her, what retching and burning and bleeding. She braved death again and again, took long chances with covering bravado. And all for Bayard's sake.

One morning when Bayard reached his office after a harrowing all-night vigil at Lella's side he was just falling asleep over the first mail when his telephone snarled. He reached for it with alarm. A voice boomed in his ear:

"Ah you talk?"
"Yes."

"Keep the line, please. Now, you at through, sir?"

Then a growl replaced the boom, a growl that made the receiver rattle. "Ah you talk, Mr. Kip? This is Colonel Marchmont. I dare say you remember our conversation about those damned contracts with Wetherell. A little further discussion might not be amiss—if you could make it perfectly convenient to drop even at, say, a quarter past five."

Bayard pondered. What new persecution was fate preparing? As he went to the office, he bought an evening paper. A heavily headed cablegram announced that the laborers in the British munition works were striking or threatening to strike. A gleam of understanding came into Bayard's eye. When he reached the desk of Colonel Marchmont he looked unabashed into the revolver muzzle of the old warhorse's one eye.

Without any preliminary courtesies or any softening of his previous tone the colonel, snorted: "These devilish contracts you made with Wetherell—the poor fellow is no longer alive—more's the pity, but—Well, I'm afraid I was a bit severe with you. I fancy we might see our way to renewing those contracts at a reasonable figure—say at a 25 per cent reduction from the terms you quoted."

Bayard smiled and shook his head. He bluffed the bluffer. "The prices we quoted included only a fair profit, Colonel. Since then materials have been going up in price every minute, owing to the demand from abroad. And the home market is booming. We can sell all our product here, and more, too, than we can make."

Colonel Marchmont squirmed, but he was a soldier and loved a good counter-attack. He smiled as he squirmed. Wetherell was avenged when his successor signed new contracts at a higher price than he had made. The changing times changed everything; yesterday's exorbitance was today's bargain.

Bayard departed with a wallet full of business. He got back to his office on feet fagged with mercenary wings. His feet were beautiful on the rug of the president's office.

Bayard felt so kindly to all the world that he hurried to the hospital to scatter good news like flowers over Lella's couch. She was in that humor when anybody else's good fortune was an added grief to her.

"I'm no use to you now," she wailed. "I never was much. But at least I dressed and kept looking fit. And you said I was pretty. But now—Oh, Bayard, Bayard! You used to call me beautiful, and I tried to be beautiful for you. But now—To be ugly and useless both—it's too much!"

Wise pathfinders say that when you are wandering in strange country you should turn every now and then and look back at the way you came. It wears a different aspect entirely from its look as you approached, and you will need to know how it will look when you return.

From childhood on, Lella had been warned against extravagance—as Bayard had, as have we all. But only now that she was looking backward could she realize the wisdom, the intolerable truth of the adage, "Waste not, want not."

Meanwhile Daphne was having so different a history that she felt ashamed. It seemed unfair to her to get well quickly and with no blemish except a scar or two that would not show, while Lella hung between death and deformity.

But seeing Bayard alone and hearing Lella fret, she felt confirmed in her belief that she had done the whole-some thing when she joined the laboring classes. There were discouragements without cease, yet Daphne was learning what a remedy for how many troubles there is in work. It seemed to be almost panacea. It was exciting, fatiguing, alarming, but it was objective. She was on her way at last to that fifty thousand a year she had dreamed of. She was uncertain yet of earning a thousand a year, but she was on the road.

Clay Wimburn, seeking chances in the West, did not see the New York papers or any other record of Daphne's accident. When he got back to New York, his pockets full of contracts, Bayard, equally successful, greeted him enthusiastically. Then he learned of the accident and the fact that Daphne was "in trade." He was indignant at the news and wanted to see her at once.

Bayard gave him the address, and Clay wasted no time asking further questions. He made haste to the subway, fuming; left the train at the Grand Central station and climbed up to a taxicab.

Then he found Daphne. She led him into a little shop empty of everything but the debris of removal.

"Where are we?" said Clay. "This was my shop."

"What's the matter? Busted already?" Clay asked, with a not unflattering cheerfulness.

"Not in the least," Daphne explained. "We've expanded so fast we had to move. We sublet and moved across the street."

"You remember Mrs. Chivvis, don't you?" Mrs. Chivvis, you haven't forgotten Mr. Wimburn. He's kept away so long you might have, though. Where've you been, Clay? But wait—you can tell me on the way over to the new shop."

When she led him into her new emporium the graceful fabrics displayed were all red rags to him. He was a bull in a crimson shop.

Daphne made Clay sit down and asked him if it were not all perfectly lovely. He waited until Mrs. Chivvis went on to the workroom. He had a glimpse of a number of girls and women on sewing bent. They were laughing and chattering.

He answered, "It's perfectly loathsome."

Instead of resenting this insult Daphne laughed till she fell against the counter. The worst of it was that her eyes were so tender.

"Where did you get all the capital for all this stock?" Clay demanded, with sudden suspicion.

"Oh, part of it we bought on credit and part of it on borrowed money." "Borrowed from whom?" "From Mr. Duane."

This was too much of too much. Clay stormed: "I'll get him!"

"Oh, no, you won't!" "Oh, yes, I will!"

"I won't have you assailing the best friend I've got in the world."

He groaned aloud at this, not noticing how she used the word "friend." She ran on. She had not talked to him for so long that she was a perfect chatterbox.

"He lent me five hundred dollars when I didn't know where else to get it. And it nailed our first real contract—a big commission from old Mrs. Romilly. We paid back Mr. Duane's five hundred and then—"

She giggled in advance at what was coming to Clay. "And then I borrowed a thousand from him. We owe him that now."

Clay was as wroth as she had wished. He took out a little book. "Well, I'll give you a check for that amount—or more. And you can pay Duane off with interest. I won't have you owing him money."

"You won't have?" Daphne mocked. "You won't have? Since when did you become senior partner here?"

"Senior partner!" Clay railed. "I'm no partner in this business! I have this business. It makes me sick to see you in it."

"Then step out on the walk," said Daphne. "You're scaring away customers and using up the time of the firm. The boudoir is no place for you, anyway."

A young woman with a bridal eye walked in and Daphne left Clay to blunder out sheepishly. He did not see that she cast sheep's eyes after him. He was a most bewildered young man. He had made a pile of money and still he was not happy!

CHAPTER XXVII.

In the course of a few wretched days Clay picked up some of the facts about Daphne's presence in Wetherell's fatal car. He was more furious at her than ever and more incapable of hating her.

He saw Bayard often, but Bayard knew little and said less. One afternoon he invited Clay to ride with him to the hospital, whence Lella was to be graduated. He warned Clay not to betray how shocked he would be at Lella's appearance, which, he said, was a wonderful improvement on what it had been.

She was, indeed, a mere shell, and Clay was not entirely successful with his compliments.

Lella sighed: "Much obliged for your good intentions. I'm a mere sack of bones, but I'm going to get well. The doctors say that if I take care of myself every minute and go to a lot of specialists and go to Bar Harbor in the hot weather and to Palm Beach in the cold and spend about a million dollars I'll be myself some day. That's not much, but it's all I've got to work for. Poor Eydie! He didn't know he was endowing a hospital when he married me."

"What do I care, honey?" Bayard cried, with perfect chivalry. "The money is rolling in and I'd rather spend it on you than on anybody else."

"The money's rolling out just as fast as it rolls in," Lella sighed. "The Lord seems to provide a new expense for every streak of luck. And that's my middle name—Expense."

She had actually learned one lesson. That was a hopeful sign.

Clay sought Daphne in her odious (to him) place of business. She asked him what she could sell him. He said he would wait till the shop closed. She raised her eyebrows impudently and gave him a chair in a corner. He sat there feeling as out of place as a strange man in a larem.

Eventually the last gurgling customer talked herself dumb; the last sewing woman went. Mrs. Chivvis pulled down the curtains in the show window and at the door and bade good night.

Then Daphne locked the door, dropped wearily into a chair, and sighed, "Well, Clay?"

"I want to know why you don't give up Tom Duane."

She shrugged her excellent shoulders again, but she did not smile. She spoke instead: "I don't ask you to give up your stenographer."

"Oh, it's like that, eh? Well, then, why won't you let me lend you money instead of Tom Duane?"

Her answer astounded him with its feminine logic: "I can borrow of Mr. Duane because I don't love him and never did and he knows it. I can't borrow of you because—"

He leaped at the implication: "Because you love me?"

"Because I used to."

"Don't you any more?" he groaned.

"How can I tell? It's been months and months since I saw the Clay Wimburn that came out to Cleveland and lured me on to New York. The only Clay Wimburn I've seen for some time has been a horribly prosperous, domineering snob who is too proud to be seen with a working woman. He wants to marry a lady. I never was one and don't want to be one. I'm a business woman and I love it."

"And you wouldn't give up your shop for me?"

"Certainly not."

QUICK RELIEF FROM CONSTIPATION

Get Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets

That is the joyful cry of thousands since Dr. Edwards produced Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel.

Dr. Edwards, a practicing physician for 17 years and calomel's old-time enemy, discovered the formula for Olive Tablets while treating patients for chronic constipation and torpid livers.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets do not contain calomel, but a healing, soothing vegetable laxative.

No griping is the "keynote" of these little sugar-coated, olive-colored tablets. They cause the bowels and liver to act normally. They never force them to unnatural action.

If you have a "dark brown mouth"—a bad breath—a dull, tired feeling—sick headache—torpid liver and are constipated, you'll find quick, sure and only pleasant results from one or two little Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets at bedtime.

Thousands take one or two every night just to keep right. Try them. 10c and 25c per box. All druggists.

The Battle of Tippecanoe fought over a hundred years ago was one of the important conflicts in the history of the United States. By routing the Indian tribes, the power of the redmen was destroyed, which did much toward winning the war of 1812.

WORSE THAN DEADLY POISON GAS

Kidney disease is no respecter of persons. It attacks young and old alike. In most cases the victim is warned of the approaching danger. Nature lights back, headache, indigestion, insomnia, lame back, lumbago, sciatica, rheumatism, pain in the joints and lower abdomen, difficulty in urinating, all are indications of trouble brewing in your kidneys.

When such symptoms appear you will almost certainly find quick relief in GOLD MEDAL Hearton Oil Capsules.

This famous old remedy has stood the test for two hundred years in helping mankind to fight off disease.

It is imported direct from the home laboratories in Holland, where it has helped to develop the Dutch into one of the sturdiest and healthiest races in the world, and it may be had at almost every drug store. Your money promptly refunded if it does not relieve you. Be sure to get the genuine GOLD MEDAL Brand. In sealed glass ages, three sizes.

Soft Coal Users ATTENTION!

Make Your Soft Coal Burn Like Hard Coal

Imperfect combustion is the cause of all the disagreeable results of burning soft coal. Much of the coal does not burn. Some of it goes up in too much black smoke. Some of it makes soot, which, in turn, coats your flues and prevents radiation of heat. A large part is wasted. SUT-NOT makes for perfect combustion. It causes all of the coal to burn without waste. SUT-NOT keeps your flues clean so that the heat can be efficiently radiated. It burns smoke, soot and ashes and in so doing this cuts your bills 20% to 30%.

The cheapest soft coal, treated with SUT-NOT, burns like hard coal.

SUT-NOT

SAVES COAL—BURNS SMOKE, SOOT AND ASHES

To the Owner To the User

SUT-NOT causes perfect combustion and saves 20% to 30% on your coal bills.

SUT-NOT produces longer, hotter, steadier fires. Tenants will not complain of cold apartments or lack of hot water.

Heat is not wasted through insulation of flues. 3/4 of an inch of soot in your flues flues decreases the heating value of your coal nearly 50%. Flues are kept clean by SUT-NOT.

Only soot smoke is practically eliminated. Decorating stays clean. Expense of repainting, etc., is saved.

SUT-NOT is merely mixed with water and sprinkled on the coal. No cumbersome plant required. It is safe and clean.

Makes equipment last longer. SUT-NOT by eliminating cinders, preserves the apparatus. Apartment building owners write for quantity prices.

For Sale by SHELDON HARDWARE CO. Put up in 60c, $1.00 and $5.00 packages. FUEL CONSERVATION CO. Sole Distributors 606-607 Security Bldg., 209 Grand Ave., Milwaukee. Special Parcel Post Package $1.00

Fuel Conservation Co. 606-607 Security Bldg., 209 Grand Ave. Enclosed $1.00. Send me your special big parcel post package of SUT-NOT, sufficient to treat TWO tons of coal. Sold under your unqualified guarantee.

Name _____ Address _____ Owner of Building _____ Dealer's Name _____

Sprinkle SUT-NOT on your soft coal and half the big work of the winter is ended.

20% to 30% less shoveling. SUT-NOT saves one ton of coal in four—saves handling of that extra ton. Some amount of coal burns longer. Every ounce burns.

Fires are easier to build with SUT-NOT treated coal.

Furnace needs attention every six instead of every four hours. Fewer ashes to be hauled. SUT-NOT treated coal burns to fine ash. Clinkers are consumed.

Simply mix SUT-NOT with water and sprinkle on the coal. No cumbersome plant to be kept in working order.

The other evening the little girl in question suddenly seeing one of Charleston's "finest" coming down the street, said to her mother:

"Oh, mother, did you know that policemen have wives?"

"What's that, dear?" queried the mother in a tone that implied to the child's ears disbeliever.

"Well, they have," said the little one, "cause I saw a woman and she was a policeman's wife. I didn't know they had wives either until I saw her."

"They say that Solomon was the wisest man."

"Yes," replied Mr. Dustin Stax. "Solomon had all kinds of a reputation. As the richest man he was able to employ any publicity talent that struck his fancy."

THE COMEBACK OF SPORTS

ROWING

By JACK VELOCK, International News Editor.

Rowing will be revived on as large a scale as possible this year, but its greatest future, the Poughkeepsie regatta will not be staged.

Such is the outlook for the sport of sweeps and shells for the present year, and, although collegiate rowing may not come back to its former place in 1919, the prospects for the year are encouraging.

The fact that the great Poughkeepsie regatta, will not be rowed until 1920 at the earliest is a great disappointment, not only to followers of rowing but to the board of stewards of the Intercollegiate Rowing Association as well.

Charles H. Mapes, one of the best known rowing solons in the east and chairman of the board of stewards in charge of the Poughkeepsie event, discussed the outlook for collegiate rowing as follows:

"While it is highly disappointing that the Poughkeepsie regatta cannot be revived this year, the outlook for rowing, nevertheless, is decidedly optimistic. Most universities which faster rowing, brought about by the war, is responsible for the fact that definite plans cannot be made until the fall. In fact, plans will not be until the commencement of the second term, that the average university will be enabled to make tangible plans for a regatta. Most universities, however, it will be practically impossible to get a line on the material which will be available before that time comes."

"Columbia, Princeton, and the Naval Academy are all planning to form crews and revive rowing on as large a scale as is practicable. All of these schools will have some crews in action, and it is expected, according to the best available reports, that intercollegiate racing will be resumed. But the races will probably be shorter and there will be no more intercollegiate school racing than in past years. Cornell and Syracuse are both doubtful as to their ability to resume rowing this year. Yet, however, the material is available in time it will not be surprising to see them return to the sweeps."

The war has taught its lessons, and in my opinion college athletics are appreciated today a hundredfold more.

I am informed that there is a good prospect for the revival of the Harvard-Yale classic this year.

NOTRE DAME STAR MAY BE NEW PURPLE COACH

Chicago, Jan. 18.—Charles Bachman, a former Notre Dame star, and a member of the Great Lakes Naval Training station championship football eleven, is under consideration as successor to Fred Murphy, coach of the Northwestern university football eleven.

Bachman was a star in track and football in his high school days at Chicago and during all four undergraduate years at Notre Dame. He coached the De Pauw university eleven for two years.

WANT TO CHANGE NAME OF MILWAUKEE TEAM

Milwaukee, Jan. 18.—Patrons of the Milwaukee club of the American association are conducting a campaign to rename the "Brewers," now that the manufacture of beer, Milwaukee's leading industry, has practically been buried. The team has been called the "Brewers" since joining the associations. The "Badgers" is favored.

CARROLL LOSES GAME TO MILWAUKEE NORMAL

Milwaukee, Jan. 18.—Milwaukee Normal basketball five handed Carroll college a trimming here last night by the score of 41 to 35. Each De Paul men were in great form. The first half ended 30 to 7, the college men coming back in the last half and playing the Normalites off their feet carrying off honors in this period by the score of 18 to 11.

CHICAGO WINS SECOND CONFERENCE GAME

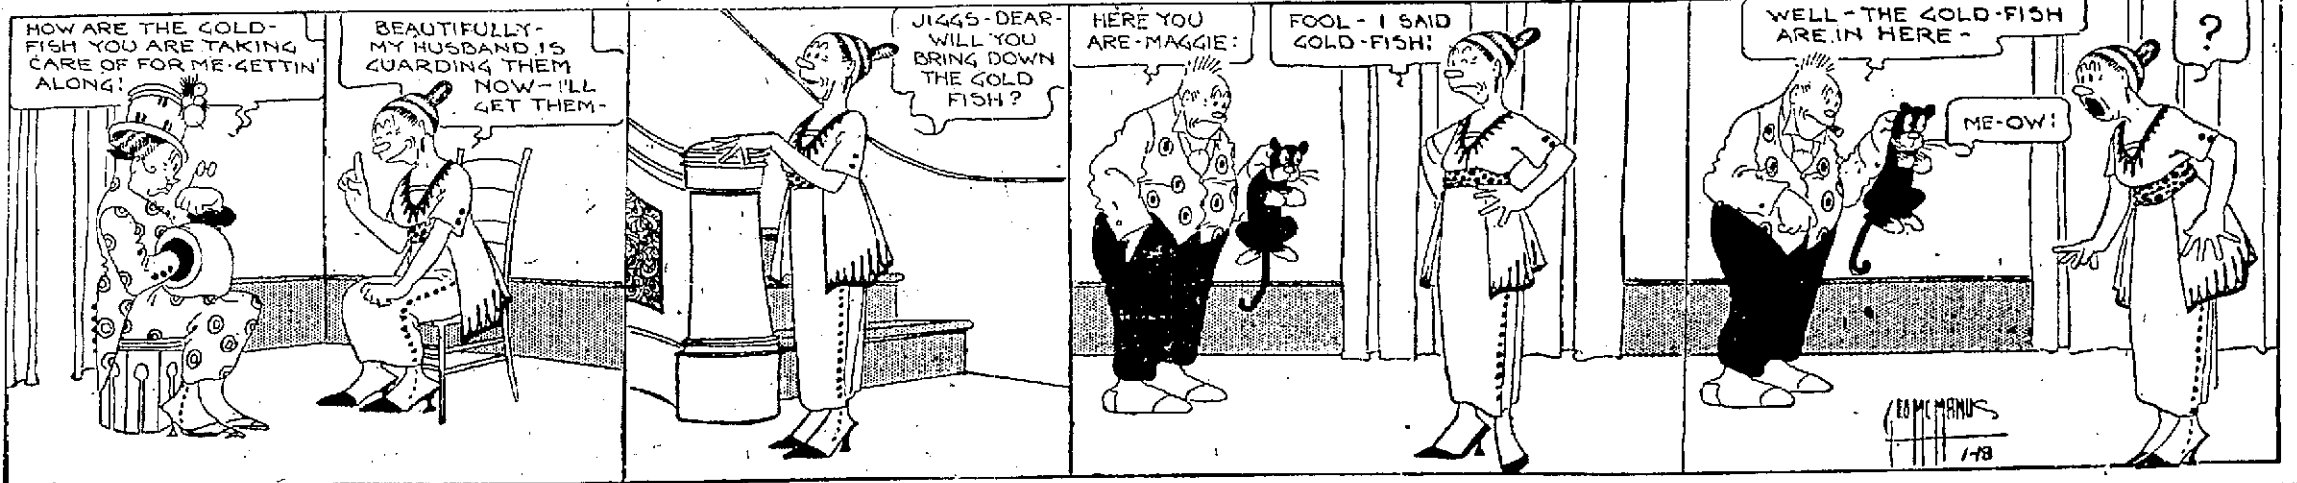

Chicago, Jan. 18.—Chicago defeated Iowa, 31 to 19, in a conference game here last night. George W. Chicago's big center starred, making five baskets.

Major Sammy Strang, Nicklita's contract as manager of the Chattanooga club of the Southern Association adds one more name to the already long list of managers who have been expected to take the place of John J. McGraw. No other leader in either league has been schooled as many managers as the Little Napoleon. The new manager has been seen to lead thirty-eight of his former subordinates elevated to the leadership of various major and minor league outfits. Among them are:

Nicklita, Billy Gilbert, Mickey Doolan, Wilbert Robinson, Mike Donlin, George Wiltse, Christ Matheson, Roger Bresnahan, Bill Dahlen, Joe McGinnity, Frank Bowmar, Bill Clarke, Arthur Devlin, Danny Shaw, Harry McCormick, Frank Chance, Jack O'Brien, Jean De Montreville, Frank Magoon, Jimmy Sheppard, Ducky Holmes, Steve Brodie, Harry Howell, Dan McGann, Bill Kletter, Al Selbach, Joe Kelly, Sandow Mertes, George Brown, George Van Halten, Billy Laufer, Bill Keller, Helen Wagner, Jack Warner, Charley Horzog, Jack Dunn and Charley Dobb.

Kennedy, an outsiders, once made a training trip with one of McGraw's clubs and won an appointment as manager of a New York State league club on the strength of that brief experience as a Giant.

BRINGING UP FATHER

Hazelton's Series of Stories By Famous Duck Hunters of America

DAYS ON THE ILLINOIS RIVER.

By William G. Hazelton.

So again tonight I'm thinking. Days of youth, of dog and gun. Days of sport in times now old. Long before life's span was run.

—J. S. Whipple.

How would you like to journey a long the grand old Illinois River for a week, bagging a few ducks on the way?

Last Fall, in late October, I did something I have wanted to do for a long time. I made a lengthy trip on the Illinois River, journeying leisurely along, bagging a few ducks on the way. I started at Morris, ten miles below the junction of the Kankakee and Des Plaines, and ended my trip at Liverpool, 180 miles down the river, rowing the entire distance, alone, except for a few companions.

I thus combined the pleasures of both travel and hunting. I fully realize that many hunters would not attempt this. They think it is too far to row a boat, especially on a river so large as the Illinois. It is true there is a big expanse of water at some points and you are liable to encounter severe storms at this season of the year. The journey took me five days and a half, facing a head wind three days. Rowing, swimming and shooting are my favorite sports, so why fear a little work with the oars? I had a boat which is my idea of any easy-rowing boat. Some hunters do not know what a good boat should be, just as some of them do not know how a flock of decoys should be placed. A good boat is half the battle in hunting, yet some hunters never realize it.

The total length of the river until it reaches the Mississippi is approximately 800 miles. I traversed two-thirds of the distance.

I traveled light, Indian fashion, and alone. You know what Kipling says: Down to Gehenna, Or up to the throne; He travels the fastest, Who travels alone.

My equipment was a boat that I had used for three years, and was not afraid to buck any stretch of water in a gun, and one small grip containing a few boxes of shells and some warm articles of clothing to use in case of need. No decoys, as I did not intend to do any decoy-shooting on the way, and knew I could rent decoys at Liverpool.

When I started out I expected to stop at a hotel each night at a town on the river. I soon found this was impracticable. I slept in a stack of timothy hay the first night. Darkness would often overtake me several miles from the nearest town. At Henry only I remained over night at a hotel. I generally stopped at cabin boats on the river with hunters and fishermen. I enjoyed doing this. A sort of Don Quixote of the river, seeking adventures on the way.

It was a beautiful day when I started and I bagged my first duck at Sugar Island, a pair of mallards near the upper end, and further along a third one. I missed one shot at a pair. (I use a double gun. No pump for me.)

Sugar Island is one of the finest islands on the river. It is high ground, never affected by overflows, and there is always game of different kinds there.

There had been a severe storm a few days earlier, driving the birds down from the North, and there were a number of nice flocks of mallards along every little ways, and a few bluebills.

I here explain that on the lower river the ducks do not (except sometimes bluebills or other deep-cover ducks) frequent the main channel of the river at all, and often do not follow its course except generally when flying. On the upper river they frequent the main channel, mallards and all other varieties more or less.

That night, at the end of my first day's journey, while resting in a hay stack up on the river bank in the moonlight at a deserted farmhouse, I was delighted with my experiences during the day. I had enjoyed myself and had ten ducks—eight mallards and two bluebills. There was a stiff breeze blowing up the river, and night overtook me three miles from Marseilles, hence the hay stack. It was the shortest run I made any day on the trip, only twelve miles. The night about 9 o'clock a flock of geese flew over me within forty yards. I could see their markings very plainly. During the night I had two callers, first a horse and later a dog. The horse was feeding along the grassy river bank. Nearing my resting place and on my hearing him and rising up out of the hay, he ran away snorting, a badly frightened horse. I knew he had seen a ghost at that deserted farmhouse.

From Marseilles to Ottawa I used the canal for eight miles, as there is a big dam there. At Ottawa I transferred my boat to the Fox River, thence into the Illinois, reaching Peru that night. It was a fine day for traveling, but I only saw one duck during the day, quite a contrast to the day previous. I sent some ducks back to Chicago from Marseilles so some of my friends could have roast duck for Sunday dinner.

Above Lacon a couple of miles I had an interesting half-hour's chat with a Catholic priest (an Englishman), who was shooting over the most likeliest decoys I saw anywhere during the season. They belonged to one of his parishioners. Good decoys are a hobby of mine.

Going through Peoria Lake I loaded my boat on the steamer David Swain at Chillicothe and took passage for Peoria, 18 miles distant, to avoid pulling against a strong wind blowing up the lake. I had a fine view of the lake from the upper deck of the steamer, and saw many flocks of bluebills, a few redheads and canvasbacks, a sample of what was to come. Also countless cots or mudhens. The river is a mile wide or more along this part of its course.

I passed many interesting views on the river. Starved Rock, Buffalo Rock, Senachwine Lake (where T. S. Van Dyke, "the historian of the Illinois River," did some of his first duck shooting), the beautiful Sister Islands near Henry, the Copperas Creek dam, and finally the picturesque little town of Liverpool located on an island in the Illinois, being ten miles from a railroad.

About two miles above Chillicothe I heard mallards calling loudly on a lake just back of the trees along the river bank. Cutting across a big bend in the river, to a fisherman's cabin, boat (he had a large assortment of boats and nets), I said to him: "What are all those ducks over there making such a noise about? Are they decoys?" "No," he said, "they are wild mallards, and there are thousands of them. They are shooting over on the other side of the river today at the Chicago Gun Club preserve, and many of the ducks are over here." They paid no attention to the shooting on the other side of the river, and little parties were constantly crossing back and forth. I got up on the river bank and took a look at them and there were ducks for a half mile, quacking away and enjoying themselves. It was getting late and I went on down the river, finding a lodging place.

Hundreds of people live on the river the year around, earning their livelihood by fishing, hunting and trapping, particularly fishing. There are many quaint characters to be met among them. Once a river man, always a river man. Many have families. I interviewed some of them.

"How long have you been on the river?" I said to a grizzled old fellow at Chillicothe. "Sixty-five years," he answered. A little later he started telling me about old Joe Carroll, the best duck shot by all odds I ever met. What a slim chance a duck had for its life after once approaching him within gunshot!

I passed several nights on cabin-boats and enjoyed visiting with the river people. They are veritable water gypsies and many of them have lived on the Mississippi, Arkansas, Ohio, Tennessee, Missouri and other large rivers, traveling from one to the other.

I passed several duck preserves owned by various clubs. The Chicago Gun Club, the Blue Wing Club, the Princeton Club, Duck Island Club and others. The Duck Island preserve of 2,000 acres is located 5 miles above Liverpool. These preserves are highly beneficial in keeping the birds on the river, as they are a refuge and the preserves are not allowed to be over-shot.

The lakes along the river, or overflow, as I call it, greatly resemble Reelfoot, Ind., Tennessee, thousands of dead trees and stumps protruding from the water. The water acts as a preservative. On account of the added volume of water coming down the river from the Chicago drainage canal the area of flooded land is much greater than formerly.

I like the upper river, especially the first twenty-five miles, the best, but there is better shooting on the lower river on account of the lakes and overflow.

Altogether I was infatuated with my trip and would not have missed the experiences for a great deal.

When the ducking season again turns I have hopes that I can be the grand old river and the crack of the wild ducks, the rife-like crack of nitro powder and the whirr of the wings of wild-fowl. That is the life and the only life!

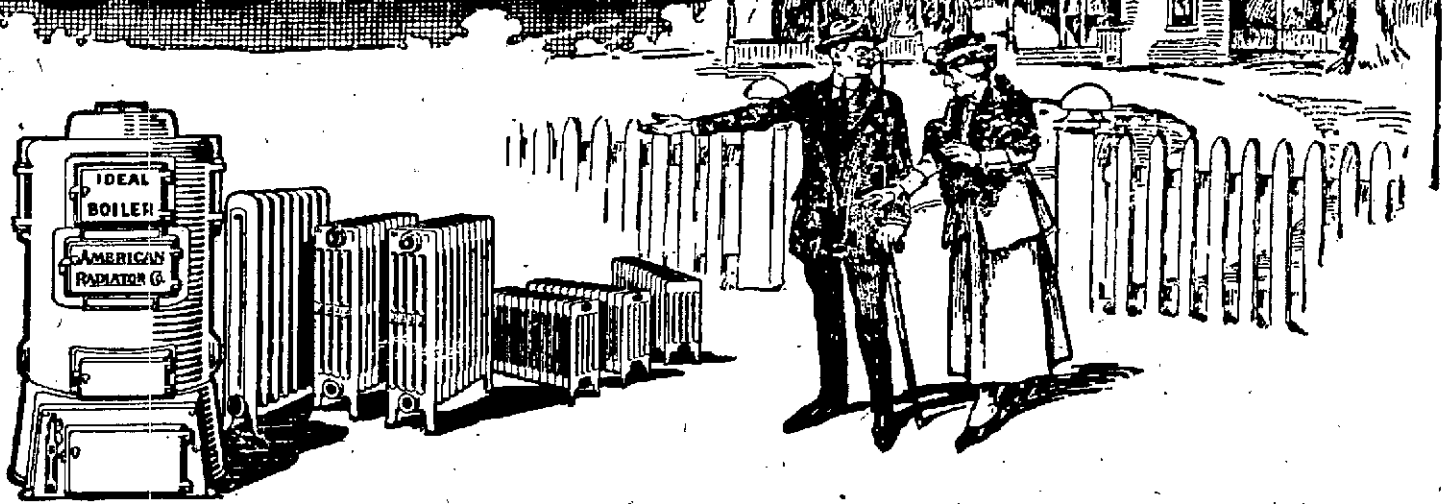

The Canadian Intercollegiate Athletic Union will be revived and the annual contests will be held this year if the Toronto varsity authorities have their way.

The light harness ice racing season will be started with the ice races to occur at Mt. Clemens, Mich., Jan. 13 to 18.

Would Continue Work.

Green Day—The women's committee of the Brown county Defense Council will recommend to the State Council of Defense when it meets early in February that the committee and its work should be continued, instead of abolished has been suggested. This was decided at a recent meeting of the executive board of the committee.

Put an American Radiator Heating Outfit in the OLD HOME

The war has taught us the value of Home Thrift. Thousands have saved more fuel money than they expected or we advertised, by their purchase of IDEAL-AMERICAN heating outfits. The Milwaukee Automotive Show January 24-30

The development of the automobile and the truck has advanced every form of transportation to its highest limit. Without the automobile the armadas of steel and wood, on land and sea would be practically helpless, but, with the automobile the world speeds on.

More people travel annually in automobiles than on the steam railroads. Government statistics prove this statement. It's a wonderful vehicle. That's why the AUTOMOTIVE SHOW, Jan. 24-30, is used each year for the purpose of acquainting the people of Milwaukee and Wisconsin with the advance ideas in construction announced by nearly 100 of the leading factories of the country.

There has been some very important new ideas introduced since the war time show of last year. These will be unfolded to you in the Auditorium next week—They involve the passenger car and the truck and thousands of accessories. The reserved ideas and thoughts of three years' will be laid on the table for your benefit.

THE AUTOMOTIVE SHOW is the clearing house for the buyer and seller. The idea is to bring both together. It's the one big mart of the year and is as eagerly awaited by the prospective buyer as by the man who has been an owner for years.

AT YOUR SERVICE 10:30 TO 10:30 DAILY IN THE AUDITORIUM.
